MARKET COMMENTARY

Local Update

The Johannesburg Stock Exchange was relatively flat over the week with the resource sector negatively impacted by a stronger dollar and some disappointing corporate earnings (ending the week off close to 4%).

The SARB's unanimous decision to keep interest rates unchanged at 7% on Thursday this week was supportive of the financial sector. The downward revision to GDP numbers surprisingly had little impact on locally listed equities.

South Africa's consumer prices increased 6.3% in the twelve months to June 2016, still above the target inflation band (3%-6%).

Global Update

U.S. stocks rose, sending the S&P 500 Index to a fresh record, as investors showed confidence corporate earnings will not derail a rally that's headed toward a fifth week. Earnings report have been positive overall with 82% exceeding profit forecasts, there is more than 180 companies scheduled to report results this week.

The ECB did not announce any changes to its policy stance nor did it provide any indication on possible technical changes to QE programme at its meeting. However, the ECB stressed its readiness, willingness and ability to act using all available instruments should it feel necessary to do so over the coming months

In US election news Hillary Clinton showed off her freshly picked running mate Tim Kaine. The stage is set.

CHART OF THE WEEK

What the chart is telling us

South Africa's consumer prices increased 6.3% in the twelve months to June 2016 after a 6.1% rise in the twelve months to May. The data came above a Reuters poll forecast of 6.2% and was largely driven by higher food prices. The SARB unanimously decided to keep interest rates unchanged at 7% on Thursday this week in line with expectations. The statement was neutral with carefully balanced arguments supporting and negating inflation pressures. The SARB made positive revisions to inflation and further cuts to GDP growth – including potential growth – with GDP now expected to be flat in 2016 (1.1% in 2017)
